

Scripps TV markets to broadcast the 65th Annual Scripps Howard Awards

May 4, 2018

CINCINNATI – To celebrate the role of journalism in creating a better-informed world, the 65th Annual Scripps Howard Awards will be broadcast in Scripps’ 24 local television markets this spring.

The 90-minute show will air on the stations through July.

The show is a rebroadcast of the April 19 program hosted by award-winning “60 Minutes” correspondent Lara Logan, which was streamed live on Facebook and YouTube and viewed more than 600,000 times.

During the event, the Scripps Howard Foundation presented more than $170,000 in prize money to journalists in 15 categories. The celebration took place at historic Memorial Hall in Cincinnati.

Winners represent news organizations both large and small, including The Washington Post, NPR and The New York Times as well as The Kansas City Star, Bristol Herald Courier and WXIA 11Alive Atlanta.

The New York Times received the night’s highest honor when it was named the winner of the inaugural Impact Award, recognizing the year’s most impactful reporting. The Times won for its reporting on sexual misconduct, which was the catalyst for the #MeToo movement.

“The winners of the Scripps Howard Awards shine light on some of the most important stories of our time,” said Liz Carter, president and CEO of the Scripps Howard Foundation. “We are thrilled to continue honoring the 2017 winners and their impact on society by bringing the show to a much broader audience.”
