Scripps Sports builds upon successful first year of NWSL on ION, announces game plans, new studio team for 2025 season

Seb Salazar and Kylen Mills join as co-hosts, Coverage kicks off March 15

ATLANTA – Coming off last year’s inaugural season of the National Women’s Soccer League (NWSL) on ION – with its broadcasts reaching more than 20 million total unique viewers* – Scripps Sports today unveiled production plans and a new studio team for the network’s 2025 season coverage, which kicks off March 15. The NWSL on ION showcases top matches from across the league every Saturday night of the regular season. ION is one of the most-watched networks on television and is available on pay TV, connected TV and free, ad-supported streaming platforms and over-the-air in 123 million homes.

In The Studio

NWSL on ION studio shows – the first-ever weekly studio shows dedicated to the NWSL by any broadcast network – break down the matches and review highlights from recent matches, spotlight upcoming league games and present in-depth, off-the-pitch feature stories on players, coaches and teams from around the league.

For the coming season, Seb Salazar and Kylen Mills will serve as co-hosts. Salazar adds ION duties to his impressive work with ESPN, where he regularly appears on ESPN FC, the company’s signature soccer program. He has also co-hosted the popular biweekly Fútbol Americas show on ESPN+. Mills, a former college soccer standout, is an Emmy-nominated sports broadcaster with a resume of on-air work across FOX Sports, NBC Sports, The Big Ten Network and Pac-12 Networks.

“Seb Salazar is an exceptional talent in soccer reporting, bringing a wealth of experience and deep-rooted passion for the game,” said Brian Lawlor, president, Scripps Sports. “His work on ESPN and his insightful commentary on Fútbol Americas have made him a trusted voice and a household name among soccer fans. Kylen Mills is a distinguished sportscaster whose extensive on-air analyst experience and deep understanding of soccer from her own time on the pitch make her an invaluable addition to our team. We are delighted to have Seb and Kylen at the helm of our NWSL on ION studio show this season and eagerly anticipate the outstanding coverage and analysis they will bring to viewers.”

The Scripps Sports production team is led by Quinn Pacini, vice president of broadcast operations. Nicole Denne, a veteran producer, serves as executive producer for the NWSL on ION’s studio content. This year, Taylor Quellman joins as studio show producer. Quellman has been serving as the pre- and post-game producer for Scripps Sports’ coverage of Vegas Golden Knights hockey, as well as holding the same role for the San Diego Padres.

In The Booth

Scripps Sports and the NWSL will again co-produce the Saturday night doubleheaders, with two distinct NWSL on ION match broadcast teams – both of which are returning for the network’s second season. The team for match one features JP Dellacamera on play-by-play with former U.S. Women’s National Team goalkeeper Jill Loyden as analyst. For match two, Maura Sheridan will take the mic for play-by-play duties while former NWSL player Jordan Angeli will serve as analyst.

“In our first season of coverage, ION quickly became a popular home for the NWSL,” said Pacini. “We are picking up where we left off with a robust and experienced broadcast team, and we look forward to another great season for NWSL fans across the country.”
